DOMESTIC DISPATCHES.

A St. Louis Reporter's Narrow Escape from Death at the hands of a Mob.

MRS. LANGTRY ARRIVES AT CHICAGO.

A Traveler's Opinions on California—Birth of a Marvelous Monstrosity—Sensation in the Tennessee Legislature.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

St. Louis, Jan. 2.—A reporter of the [illegible] last evening to interview [illegible] of the Vulcan iron works. He met a party of men in session [illegible] of [illegible] who was [illegible] by the other men two [illegible]. Afterwards, the reporter [illegible] by a police sergeant to the [illegible] hall. While there a man tapped him on the shoulder, calling him by name, and [illegible] requesting him to step outside a minute. The reporter complied, when he was [illegible] struck a violent blow in the face and a thrust made at him with a knife, which penetrated his clothing and skin at a point near the left [illegible]. A couple of police officers opportunely arrived and interfered, and [illegible] it is believed to have committed the assault, was [illegible]. The situation at the Vulcan works is unchanged and no conference yet has taken place between the men and officers of the company. The [illegible] impression is that a compromise will be effected during the week.

St. Louis, Jan. 2.—Davison, the reporter who was assaulted by the Vulcan iron workers last night, according to his story, was this morning fined $25 for disturbing the peace.

Mrs. Langtry in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Mrs. Langtry arrived here yesterday afternoon and was driven directly to the Pacific Hotel, and remained in her parlors the entire afternoon. In the evening she appeared at Haverly's theater in "The Honeymoon." The audience was large but not crowded; some seats were vacant. The audience was not very fashionable [illegible] cordial.

The Times will publish an interview in which [illegible] declines to discuss her private affairs, besides saying that she does not believe Mrs. Langtry gave utterance to the published statements [illegible] to her. She feels flattered by her reception [illegible] America, and likes all the cities she visited, [illegible], which she pronounces cold.

The Times publishes an interview with a member of the company, who asserts that Mrs. Langtry knows nothing of true acting, that what she knows she learned from Mrs. Labouchere, a soubrette of the stage, and that as a consequence she is only [illegible] with an antiquated stage business and [illegible] of a soubrette.

Costly Traveling.

[illegible], Jan. 1.—An eastern excursionist writing from San Francisco to the Sun says: "I have thrice made the overland trip. How invalids survive the fatigue of an overland ride puzzles me. Depend upon it, California can never be a fashionable winter resort for [illegible]. With my wife I made an excursion trip to Honolulu from New York and return [illegible]. Two excursion tickets [illegible] to Honolulu and return from California [illegible]. Compare this writer's rule to that of Florida and Georgia. The climate are the same. [illegible] charged for board and lodging are as [illegible] as in the south. It is the travel that makes the difference. Indeed, California hotel [illegible] less than Chicago, while the tables are [illegible].

Birth of a Monstrosity.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—Something unprecedented in the annals of maternity in this city occurred at the residence of Dr. D. M. McFall last Saturday [illegible], being nothing less than the birth of [illegible] children with two well formed bodies, [illegible] upon the sternum, with one neck, one well formed head, the shoulders resting on the right and left [illegible] of the bodies, and the face looking to the front. [illegible] say it is one of the finest [illegible] that ever came under their observation.

To be Religiously Instructed.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—The governor and executive [illegible] amended the by-laws and rules for the [illegible] of the state primary and reform schools [illegible] provisions that the superintendent have [illegible] religious instruction of the inmates, [illegible] must be non-sectarian. He may invite [illegible] of various denominations to officiate, but [illegible] must be called to the regulation. [illegible] may be held for Roman Catholic [illegible] Sunday, and instruction given by them [illegible].

Gov. Cleveland's Message.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—The legislature assembled at [illegible]. Alfred C. Chapin was elected speaker. [illegible] Gov. Cleveland, in his message, [illegible] expenditures of large sums in the alterations [illegible] until the effect of the abolition of [illegible] is ascertained; favors frequent visits and [illegible] examinations of prisons; favors reform in civil service; denounces special legislation [illegible] interferes with the administration of [illegible], and advocates strict economy in [illegible] public funds.

[illegible] Legislature.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—A sensation was created in [illegible] by a passage in the opening prayer of [illegible]: "From repudiation, and from all [illegible], good Lord deliver us." The [illegible] was organized by the election of W. L. [illegible], as speaker, and E. B. Wade [illegible]. Failure to organize to-day postpones the [illegible] until the 16th, as the law fixes [illegible] after organization.

Preferred to Walk.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—Gov.-elect J. M. Begole filed [illegible] with the secretary of state to-day. [illegible] at noon and a carriage was [illegible] to bring him to the capitol, which [illegible] preferring to walk.

[illegible] and his brother, E. P. Ferry, of [illegible]. The senatorial question is, Ferry [illegible] is expected to-night. Friends [illegible].

[illegible] Senatorial Chances.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—At a caucus of republican members of the legislature last night it was decided to [illegible] speaker. Hale is a friend of Windom's [illegible] senate and Windom's friends [illegible] insures Windom's election.

Chinese Wash Houses.

[illegible].—The Sun says: "The Chinese [illegible] more and more complicated. [illegible] department has decided that Chinese [illegible] be considered as laborers, and as [illegible] excluded from admission to the United [illegible] provision of the act restricting [illegible]. How far has the treasury department [illegible] the functions of the judiciary by [illegible]."

Grant's Movements.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—A reporter has interviewed [illegible], who said: "I am going to Cuba for recreation [illegible]. I do not know how long [illegible] far we shall go. I am going [illegible] business nor health."

"You may visit Vera Cruz and the City [illegible]," the reporter suggested.

"[illegible] you or I do not know," was the reply.

Cleveland on Convict Labor

[illegible], Jan. 2.—In his message Gov. Cleveland [illegible] judgment the state should not seek to [illegible] from its convict labor, especially if [illegible] of competing between convicts and [illegible] is thereby increased and the [illegible] of the prisons with its attendant [illegible] results.

Smallpox.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—Seventy-six deaths from [illegible] past week. To-day a case occurred in [illegible]. Over 300 prisoners, confined for [illegible] were discharged. The disease is attributed [illegible] and negligence of the health [illegible].

Operatic Festival.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—The College of Music has arranged [illegible] Mapleson to give a third operatic festival [illegible] for the week beginning January [illegible]. [illegible] of season reserved seats begins [illegible], the sale being by auction.

Business Failures.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—Francis Carville & Sons, [illegible], with branch in this city, [illegible] Mathews & Co., brokers, number [illegible]; liabilities $300,000.

Suicides.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—The body of a dead man was [illegible] at Kent's hotel this morning. He [illegible] "Dr. Thorne, India," but left a [illegible] to the proprietor of the hotel saying his name [illegible] Thompson, of Salisbury, Connecticut, [illegible] telegraph his wife at that place [illegible] in Brooklyn. He had a hundred and [illegible] and a gold watch on his person [illegible] of morphine.

Crime Crumbs.

[illegible] jury of Boston found another indictment [illegible] Asher I. Benyon, the fugitive ex-[illegible] National bank. The offense [illegible] his returns to the comptroller. [illegible] is understood that Benyon is in [illegible].

NOTABLE DEATHS.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—J. F. McJunkin, attorney [illegible], is dead.

[illegible], Jan. 2.—Edward Stein, Russian importer [illegible] New York, died in his apartments [illegible] found yesterday morning.

RAILWAY NEWS.

Gould's Great Scheme for a Continuous Line from Cincinnati into Texas and New Mexico—Consolidation of Southern Roads, etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

[illegible] ... Iron Mountain ... Gould ... St. Louis ... [illegible]

... between that place and Murphysboro, in that state. From there the course will be almost due north toward Shelbyville, Ky., passing through Frankfort, the capital, and thence on to Cincinnati. It is intended to be completed to New Orleans, and there connect with the southwestern system, terminating at the Crescent City. This line, if completed according to the programme, would give Mr. Gould a continuous route from Cincinnati into Texas and New Mexico.

Prospective Consolidation.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Senator Newton Booth and ex-Senator Chaffee are here. The Times says the real purpose of the bill now pending in congress is to enable the Southern Pacific and other railroad companies to consolidate as one corporation. It does not seem to be generally understood. The idea is to allow all companies which now control roads which are to form a new southern line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, to consolidate under one management. The through line is not yet completed, but there are only a few small gaps to be filled to make a through line from San Francisco to New Orleans. Various links in the projected consolidation are the Southern of California, South Pacific of Arizona and of New Mexico, the Galveston and Houston, the San Francisco, the Louisiana and Texas, the Vermillion and Baton Rouge, the Mississippi Valley and Chesapeake and Ohio roads. Of these the only uncompleted roads are the Vermillionville and Baton Rouge, and Mississippi Valley, both of which will be completed some time during the present year. When this is done through trains can be run from San Francisco to Newport News under orders from a single train dispatcher. This line is the one which Messrs. Stanford, Huntington and Crocker have been trying for years to complete, and their plans are nearly fulfilled. It is considered that these gentlemen think that by the consolidation of the whole line under one management it can be operated independent of state or territorial interference.

Large Transfer of Railroad Land.

New York, Jan. 2.—A Wall street stock holder says Vice President Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, authorizes the statement that the syndicate recently negotiating for a part of the company's lands has made a definite proposition for about 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 acres east of the Missouri river. This syndicate is said to be composed of ten members, each of whom has agreed to provide an equal share of preferred stock, to be taken in payment for land and returned. The strength of the stock towards the end of the week was due to a knowledge of the progress of negotiations.

Fall in Texas Pacific Stock.

New York, Jan. 2.—The Post's financial says: Shortly after noon there was a sharp break of the entire list, caused by a raid made against the Texas Pacific, which dropped from 1½ to 3⅛, making total decline of that stock 2½ from Saturday's prices.

BY OCEAN WIRE.

The "United Ireland" has a Libel Suit on its Hands—Gossip in Spain Concerning the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Dublin, Jan. 2.—In the police court to-day O'Brien was arraigned on a charge of seditious libel, based on an article entitled "Accusing Spirits," printed in the United Ireland, of which paper it is claimed O'Brien is editor. Sullivan and several Irish members of parliament were present. Sullivan submitted there was not a particle of evidence to show that O'Brien was the editor or publisher of United Ireland on December 23, the date on which the article complained of appeared. The prosecution was postponed three weeks, pending consideration of an application of defendant to the court of the queen's bench for an order compelling the magistrate having charge of the case to take evidence proving the statements made in the article.

Sale of Thoroughbreds.

London, Jan. 2.—At a sale of thoroughbreds to-day Iechonite brought 900 guineas, See-saw 1100 guineas, and Geologist 1150 guineas.

An Old Matter Revived.

New York, Jan. 2.—The Herald's Madrid special says: Diplomatic correspondence in the Spanish red book, just published, contains the note of Secretary Blaine deprecating the interference of European governments in the affairs of the neutrality of the Panama canal, and the note of the Spanish minister in reply, dated March 15, 1882. The latter protests against the Monroe doctrine, and against American claims to exercise the sole protectorate. It denies that the Colombian treaty gave the United States exclusive or prior rights of protectorate over the Panama canal, and winds up by stating that his majesty's government thinks that, now the canal is in course of construction, it is indispensable to determine by common accord the joint action of the powers to secure the liberty of traffic and commerce between the oceans, and deems that the best means of affecting this object would be under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, to invite other nations to adhere to principles therein expressed. The Madrid press approves the attitude of the cabinet on this question.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

The Latest News per Steamer from Beyond the Pacific—Diplomatic Matters—Prompt Action of the American Minister—Prevalence of Cholera—Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

San Francisco, Dec. 31.—Per City of Peking from Hongkong, Dec. 1st, is obtained the following news:

FROM CHINA.

Prince Kung continues dangerously ill. Li Hung Chang is expected in Peking from Tientsin to assume the direction of foreign affairs.

Envoy from Japan was received by Tsung Li Yamen Oct. 30. His arrival was made the occasion for a renewal of the inquiries concerning Japan's intentions about the Loo Choo islands. The United States envoy is constantly harrassed on this subject. Possibly because he was with General Grant when the matter was investigated three and a half years ago.

The Chinese government is exasperated at the action of France respecting Tonquin. The belief is growing that actual resistance will be made to further French invasion. China's declarations are unusually defiant.

Cholera is devastating the cities and villages in the interior of Kwan Tung province.

The American envoy has been compelled to take action against the persecution instituted by the viceroy at Nanking, against a Chinese clerk employed by the American firm of W. S. Wetmore & Co. of Shanghai. Not long since a factory for cotton yarn was projected by this firm under the conditions of the treaty. The [illegible] viceroy claimed the undertaking was a violation of the monopoly given to the Chinese company, and issued orders forbidding Chinese to participate in the foreign undertaking, and decreed the arrest of Wetmore's native clerk. The alleged ground of the arrest was that the clerk had been concerned in the Tai Ping rebellion, a quarter of a century ago. The real offense is believed to be his taking shares in the new company. The United States envoy directed the American officials at Shanghai to prevent the arrest, and made such representations at Tsung Li Yamen as will lead to the cancelling of the viceroy's orders. The diplomatic representatives at Peking unanimously approve the American envoy's action.

FROM JAPAN.

Yokohama, Dec. 12.—The Japanese army is to be increased by several infantry regiments. The navy is also to be augmented. These changes were sanctioned by the mikado November 22d.

There was a large convocation of Buddhist priests this month at the famous temple of Koyasan, in the province of Kii, for the purpose of abolishing the ancient rules against marriage, eating flesh, etc., by the clergy.

Cholera is reported prevalent in and about the city of Queen.

WASHINGTON.

Logan Speaks in the Senate on the Fitz John Porter Bill.

TALK ON TOBACCO IN THE HOUSE.

A Political Reminiscence Concerning Thurman as a Tutor—The Amours of a French Count and an American Colonel.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Senate.

Washington, Jan. 2.—[illegible]

[illegible] Porter [illegible] ... Logan ... President Grant ... in 1874, stating that Porter claimed to have procured new evidence which would either acquit them or greatly modify the judgment in his case, and asking the president to examine the question or have it examined and a decision upon its justice or merits made. The latter is the president's reply, saying that he regarded the case as one of great importance, particularly to the army and navy; that he read the evidence given before the court martial and then to the subsequent defense, and determined that if he had been wronged that he (president) would right him as far as he could, said that he had come to the conclusion that no new facts had been developed, and it was doubtful whether by action of the executive any new trial could be legally given. Logan said he would make no comment upon President Grant's letter, but leave it to its own comment. Upon the question of the condition of the road which his friend Porter said was encumbered with 200 wagons, Logan said he made a calculation showing that the true number of wagons along this road instead of 200. The argument that Porter was not to blame for failing to obey promptly the first order, was answered by the fact that he received a prior order dated at 6 o'clock on the 27th, stating that the enemy was moving on the ground and that he (Porter) must be ready to move. Logan proceeded next to consider what he termed the second branch of the case, namely, the question whether there was a battle on the 29th of August, 1862. One reason given by the Schofield board for their report in Porter's favor was that there was no battle that day, but only a skirmish. How a board could reach that conclusion he could not understand, or it was directly contradicted by evidence, and upon this point he read from the testimony of generals McDowell, Reynolds, Schenck, Robinson, Grover, Barney, Sigel, and other union officers, and from reports of officers of Jackson's command, to show how severe the battle was that day. One of the division commanders under Longstreet admitted that his troops were engaged in the battle on the 29th.

Sewell—If the senator succeeds in proving that, he will place the commanding general in an awkward position.

Logan—I will prove it by General Wilcox, and by Lee, and by Longstreet.

Sewell—There is no question but Longstreet was there on the 29th.

Logan—Yes, and I was in the fight too.

Sewell—That has been always denied by General Pope.

Logan—It makes no difference who denies it. I am talking about a fact. It is very strange this constant effort to make this a trial of Pope.

Sewell—It ought to be.

Logan—Oh yes, well, I make it a trial of Porter, and will make this country understand, too, that Porter is on trial for disobedience of Pope's orders, claiming to show there had not been a battle on the 29th. Logan said the next question was, did Porter receive any orders to take part in that battle, and if so, did he obey or disobey it? Porter arrived at Bristow station at 9:30 A. M., and ten minutes later wrote Burnside, among other things, he thought the enemy was stopped, and adding: "I hope Mac's works up. What is the news? "Mac" had been removed from the command of the army and Pope had been put there in his stead, and the hope was to get Pope out and have Mac restored. This was the meaning of the remark. Again, Porter wrote in the same letter: "I wish I hear of us soon by way of Alexandria." Why by way of Alexandria? If the army was successful it would follow the enemy into the interior of Virginia, but Alexandria was a place to retreat to in case of defeat. There were only two ways to explain Porter's conduct. Either he was a coward or else he did not intend to fight under Pope at all as the senator from New Jersey (Sewell) said he was not a coward, the other explanation must be accepted.

Sewell asked Logan if he meant to convey the idea that Porter was on the flank of the confederate army, or anywhere near it.

Logan—No, I do not wish to convey the idea that he was on the confederate army at all, for he was not, but if he had obeyed Pope's order he would have been on the confederate flank.

Sewell—The senator does not understand the situation. The order of Pope contemplated his striking the left flank of Jackson, and not Longstreet, who was in his front.

Logan—Upon what authority does the senator say Longstreet was in his front?

Sewell—Upon Longstreet's own evidence.

Logan denied that there was a large force in Porter's front and read from the confederate reports to show that the dust of which Porter spoke was made by driving a few mules along the road with brush tied to their tails (Laughter). The dust, in the road, said Logan, was an attack by a few mules and a brush pile, and though he had twelve thousand men under his command, scared him so badly that he retreated. He wants to be restored to the army from which he was expelled because when ordered to attack he failed to obey on account of the mules and brush. Why, if he had been a volunteer soldier he would not have been permitted to stay in this country. There never was a man in the volunteer service who would have had cheek enough to come before congress, or any other tribunal, and ask that this evidence should be spread out before the world. Logan continued: "During my life I have served a good seven years in the army. I do not wish to speak of what I have done myself. But I have been in a great many battles, and if a true has ever been found during the whole of my experience where, with a command of 2,000 men, I would not have attacked any army anywhere, if I had been ordered to do so, I should want to be kicked out of the army in disgrace. There is no excuse for this man's conduct. Have those who seek to excuse him never heard of the charge at Balaklava? Have they never heard of the forlorn hope?"

Logan gave way for a motion, by Cockrell, to go into executive session.

When the doors were reopened the senate adjourned.

On call of states for bills being concluded, the tax bill placing tobacco exported by rail into Canada and Mexico, on the same footing as tobacco exported in vessels was passed.

A bill was passed providing that perique tobacco may be sold by manufacturer or producer in form of carrots, directly to legally qualified manufacturers, to be used in manufacture of cigarettes or smoking tobacco, without payment of tax.

The ways and means committee took up the cotton schedule. The grade of value in exceeding 25 cents per pound ad valorem was made from 25 to 40 cents, valued at more than 25 cents per pound and not more than 40, from 15 to 35 cents, at 40 and not more than 50, from 20 to 22, at 50 and not more than [illegible], 25 to 27 cents; at 60 and not more than 75, from 30 to 35 cents.

A Count and a Colonel.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A full fledged sensation is agitating diplomatic circles. There are four parties to it: a count, the wife of a French secretary, a belle, a continuous uncle of a certain colonel in the U. S. army. The count undertook to give lessons in French to a young lady who is noted for her beauty and refinement. The young lady took both lessons and the count, and refused, much to the disgust of her uncle, who has antipathy to foreigners, especially when handsome and fastidious. The colonel, who is thought to have a liking for the young lady himself, secured the uncle's antipathy to this particular foreigner. The four met at the uncle's residence a few nights ago. The count was cautioning in his attentions to the belle, and her eyes beamed with a favor dangerously akin to love. The uncle and the colonel saw and outraged the uncle. He deserted the conversation became personal, and the young lady got up and left the room. Then there ensued expressions which were freely, bringing on a climax swiftly. The count left, sent a challenge, which was accepted, and pistols and next week chosen as weapons, but the friends are diverted whether the friends will succeed in making a settlement, as they are trying to do.

Passage of the Modoc War Indemnity Bill.

Washington, Jan. 2.—On Saturday Representative George had the bill to reimburse the state of Oregon for expenses incurred in suppressing hostilities in the Modoc war, so amended as to include the reimbursement of the state of California for similar expenses. The senate to-day concurred in the amendment to the bill. It now only requires the executive signature to become a law. It gives Oregon $70,000 and California $4000.

The Late Minister Allen.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Owing to the absence of the family of Allen, late Hawaiian minister, no arrangements have been made for the disposition of his remains. The body is lying at Hampton, under charge of his young son. There is some question as to what courtesy the diplomatic corps and officers of the government should show toward deceased, as Allen held a dual capacity, both as a citizen of the United States and representative of the kingdom.

Patents to Pacific Slope Inventors.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Patents were to-day awarded to the following named Pacific slope inventors: Wm. Adams, Salem, Or., car coupling; Adolph V. Anderson, Virginia City, stock car; Geo. A STARTLING STORY.

The Dark Spot in Gambetta's Private Life and the Real Cause of his Death.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New York, Jan. 2.—The Sun's special says: Gambetta's corpse reposes on a bed, and the eyes, which are wide open, preserve their customary expression, while the mouth seems to be mobile and the hair thrown back from the forehead. There is noticed in all the features a death-like and disfigured his countenance. Perhaps had he been like ordinary mortals, he might have recovered, but with living and excesses of all sorts had brought on diabetes, which was complicated with other disorders. The patient being asthmatic, the use of anesthetics was proscribed. Without anesthetics it was feared he would not survive the operation. Besides, with the condition of his blood, gangrene was an inevitable consequence of incision. He would assuredly have died from the result of the operation as he did die of its absence, therefore it was judged unwise to attempt what could only have increased his suffering. This was the decision of his medical attendants. Another complication, not generally known, was that of varicose veins on the left leg, the existence of which explains certain attitudes often severely commented upon as undignified. He was physically incapacitated from sitting straight in his chair. It is impossible to affirm, until after the autopsy, what is asserted by some persons, that he had received a bullet in the abdomen. Still without doubt the wound in the arm was the primary cause of death, and precipitated immobility, depriving him of the exercise prescribed as indispensable to one of his constitution. It is whispered that Gambetta disobeyed his medical order of strict diet of milk and eggs throughout his illness. His friends have sought to conceal the gravity of the situation, and above all the story of a woman in the tragedy. Nevertheless, no doubt is permissible that the shot which directly or indirectly caused his death was fired by a lady who is well known in Paris, and whose pseudonym, "Leonton," conceals the patronymic of one of the most honorable Israelitish families of Bordeaux. She left her husband, the [illegible] general of the Gironde department, to follow the fortunes of him by whose eloquence in the Baudin subscription and trial she was completely fascinated, and meeting with him to assist and desert her family. Their connection has lasted ever since. He was impatient of the chain he could not break, especially as a child was born the succeeding year whose paternity he refused to acknowledge. These refusals caused scenes of recrimination and often of positive violence between the lovers. The man wearied of the connection and the woman clung devotedly to him for whom she had sacrificed her honor. Gambetta disliked the child, who was sickly but intelligent, and lives at his nephew's. It is said Gambetta, in character and nature, two years ago, exalted the husband, died, and she summoned Gambetta to fulfill his promise of marriage, but received another refusal. He made an agreement, however, to provide for young Leon on condition that he should be educated in Germany. The mother hesitated, but finally consented and accompanied the child and his father to Dresden. This was the journey so much commented upon last year by the European press, which ascribed political motives to the presence of Leon. Meantime Mme. Leonton after their return, Leonton went every Saturday to his villa, where she was accepted as mistress by the servants, and returned Monday morning in his carriage. Their quarrels also continued till within a week. Three weeks ago. Grief estranged the mysterious [illegible] of the ill-starred establishment, and finally the [illegible] announced was a scene of the unhappy establishment. Gambetta lost his temper, giving vent to abuse and coarse language, such as he was wont to employ in moments of passion. She was exasperated and seized a revolver and fired. He raised his hand to turn aside the weapon and received his death wound. Everything else is conjecture. None but they knew the trouble, and Gambetta tried yet to make an effort to vouch for the authenticity of the version of the unhappy story, and I assume no entire responsibility for it, no matter how different it may be from others which may obtain publicity.

SPORTING NOTES.

Joe Coburn Interviewed.

New York, Jan. 2.—Joe Coburn, ex-champion pugilist, and Joe and Sullivan have agreed to give sparring exhibitions about the country. They will give a few exhibitions in Boston and other cities, then start for the Pacific slope. They divide equally the proceeds. Being asked if Sullivan didn't consider his name so great a drawing card that he would dictate terms, Coburn replied, "That's all right, but think my name will draw, too, don't you? I know a great many people along the Pacific coast that used to be my friends. If you and Sullivan go on an extensive tour, who will be with Jem Mace and his unknown?" "That has been arranged. We will return at any moment required." "Do you know anything about the status of the unknown?" "Nothing more than that he is a New Zealander." "What does Sullivan think of him?" "To say, he can lick any man living they bring. I believe he can too. Sullivan is a sturdy young fellow. There don't seem to be able to do much with you at your health. He tried to get me on your [illegible]." "Do you know Mace?" "I do not, at one moment, think Mace is the master living can lick him on the floor. I don't want him to hand Mace, tried it and failed." "If you were ten or twelve years younger do you think you could give Sullivan a battle?" "Ten or twelve years ago I would have fought any one in the world. I am done with the prize ring now. My last fight was with Mace. Everybody knows that was not got, but they would not let us fight."

[illegible] the accidental wound [illegible] ... patient at his ... which was confined by ... his condition, which ... The wound was healing nicely, ... desire to appear in public to show his ... so strong that he requested his physicians ... which ... Gambetta ... he was led to ... to appear in the chamber once, at least in the room of the commission of which he was chairman, which he believed would put an end to the outrageous reports in circulation. The doctor, against his own judgment, ... the pus from the wound being deprived its natural outlet, took another course, burrowing under the skin, toward the abdomen and manifested itself in two large abscesses under the armpit, which caused him the greatest pain. He had arranged from his bed, hoping to be able to make a trip towards the next day, but the fever set in once when a slight fever appeared. This was subsided in twenty-four hours, and he began to revive, but on Sunday night, before Christmas, Gambetta, who was always a great eater, ate heartily and according excited during a political discussion suffered a relapse. In the meantime the pus had worked its way toward and now showed itself in the stomach. Later another abscess appeared, grew in size and nearly blocked the intestines. This presaged the end. The autopsy showed nothing except of the intestines.

LAST MOMENTS OF THE DYING STATESMAN.

Paris, Jan. 2.—The Republique Francaise publishes the following authentic account of the passing away of Gambetta: Early Sunday morning a notable change for the worse in Gambetta's condition was noticed. Never before has he was allowed to take his cuisine of ultimate recovery. At 9:30 he was able to have his bed changed without great difficulty, with the assistance of Dr. Lhespan and some friends. The doctor, who up to this time had been very cautious was unable to longer conceal his apprehensions. In the afternoon the disease increased, and the patient's strength visibly diminished. Gambetta's father-in-law, sister and other friends were sent for before the death agony began at 10 P. M. At 10:45 Gambetta recovered consciousness sufficient to thank his friends for their attention, which he did with perfect calmness. His breathing then became more difficult. At 11 the patient lost consciousness, and at 11:55, after a few feeble moans, expired. It may be said, without suffering and without suspecting it was near.

For nearly 20 hours before, Gambetta became unconscious he complained that he was tortured with pains as if a ball of red-hot iron were inside him. Several times during the illness he spoke to Bert, one of the chamber deputies, upon matters weighing upon his mind, although briefly. Statesmen and politicians were summoned to his bedside for the purpose of receiving communications, but the surprise of death had been upon him when they arrived.

The funeral will be conducted with [illegible]. The family are anxious that the burial should take place at Nice, but friends advise that it take place at Paris. In consequence of the functionaries created under authority it has been the first chance to place seals on his papers.

Nobody's articles published so far reflect on the great calamity of Gambetta's death, but continue their own view is the loss of the statesman who did not dream after Sedan.

PRESS COMMENTS.

London, Jan. 2.—The Pall Mall Gazette says: It must be admitted the death of the man will not break up the prestige of France, but will have far too sad [illegible] of the republic. Though we are convinced the cause of the republic has been always has been susceptible of the force of the French tradition. He thought himself a new Mirabeau or Richelieu. Liberalism all over Europe will deplore the loss of a great and remarkable, one of a statesman who used a truly virile mind for a while to close, and who was live in French history and of the most courageous, acute and effective builders of the republic. His loss is a serious or will a serious satisfaction to all actionists and enemies of the government all over Europe.

London, Jan. 2.—The Daily News in a leading editorial says: Since the death of Thiers there was not a Frenchman who could be compared to Gambetta, he stood, like Saul, head and shoulders above his colleagues. His death has scattered many conjectures and made grim banter of many political arrangements. His is one that gamut all calculation.

The Morning Post says: Whether France has really lost by the death of Gambetta can never be determined with certainty. The republic is deprived of one of its grandest pillars, its stability is not seriously weakened.

Vienna, Jan. 2.—On the bourse the death of Gambetta is regarded as a guarantee of peace and it is thought it will prevent war between France and Germany for a long time.

London, Jan. 2.—The Standard says: Gambetta stood will above and beyond all other men in France.

The Times: Gambetta's death was a sudden extinction of a powerful individual force. The future of France is rendered uncertain as a ship taken aback. The course of events in Europe is likely to be not less profoundly disrupted. The world is itself poorer for the untimely loss of so potent a force and France is bereaved of one of the statesmen who taught her to be true to herself, even in the hour of defeat.

Daily Telegraph: Gambetta had not the least taint of a Caesar. His name will live forever in national history.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—All the newspapers have articles on Gambetta. The semi-official Post says: A most eminent political force has departed. How is a man of strong passion and great power, who seemed still destined to play a great part in history, it is a significant question whether it would have been a benefit to Europe.

The National Zeitung says: Germany has lost her greatest enemy. Gambetta knew his retribution in the future was bound up with a war of revenge, and his whole energy was directed in preparing for it. He may be said to have constituted himself a perpetual danger to the peace of Europe.

The Tagblatt says: The name of a man is a name of the past. His decease affords less cause of rejoicing than any sort of a loss. His grandly constituted character commanded respect, even from his enemies, and that there is no necessity to conceal the fact that the peace of Europe appears to be less assuredly secured than for a long time internally.

Madrid, Jan. 2.—The announcement of Gambetta's death caused a great sensation here. It is universally conceded that France has sustained a heavy loss.

TRIBUTE OF SIR CHARLES DILKE.

London, Jan. 2.—Sir Charles Dilke, in a speech at Chelsea, said the entrance of 1883 was saddened by the death of the greatest of all modern Frenchmen. Sir Charles bore testimony to the mourning loss of England for the loss France had sustained. He paid tribute to the English commissioners who took part in negotiating for a commercial treaty with France who had been struck with Gambetta's courtesy and kindliness. That in England all parties admired Gambetta's magnificent courage, his tremendous energy, his splendid oratory and his untamable spirit and generous spirit, which constituted him the first of all Frenchmen.

FUNERAL POSTPONED.

Paris, Jan. 2.—There is some idea of postponing Gambetta's funeral until the 10th inst., so that the senate and chamber of deputies may continue in a body.

It is estimated that three thousand persons visited the house at Ville D'Avray yesterday. The people were admitted in groups of five or ten into the hall, whence they ascended to the small bedroom where the body is lying. Visitors included ministers, senators and other functionaries. The room is poorly furnished. The body lies on a small iron bedstead, covered by sheets, except the head, which rests on a pillow. His face is pale and his hair appears to be fifteen years older than the reality was. A few flowers were on the foot of the bed. Otherwise there were no emblems usual in France on such occasions. A guard was seated at the foot of the bed sketching the face.

The [illegible] will probably take Gambetta's place.

Troops at Paris and Marseilles have been ordered to attend the funeral of Gambetta.

Paul de Cassagnac, royalist, sees the finger of God in these last words, and recalls the story that Gambetta was shot by a woman.

Rochefort, in the Intransigeant, publishes an article in behalf of Savary, and telling the story where Gambetta threatened at Belleville to leave him to sleep in peace.

The post mortem examination of Gambetta was held in order to contradict the rumor that the death was caused by a bullet in the abdomen. The corpse is to lie in state at the St. Didier until the funeral.

Gambetta's sister has gone to Nice to make arrangements for a private funeral. The senate has declared the funeral should be equal to that of Thiers.

Gambetta's fortune is estimated under two francs.

Two Jurors go Wrong.

San Francisco, Jan. 2.—Considerable excitement was caused this morning in one of the departments of the superior court, when Judge Hunt stated that he had been notified by counsel for defendant, in the case of Lewis vs. McCarthy, involving the possession of certain horses, that an attempt has been made by two jurors engaged in trial of the case then pending before the court, to defeat the ends of justice, at the same time naming the two jurors, Joseph R. Selleck and M. P. Howe. The judge on his own motion, continued further hearing of the case, and ordered Howe's name stricken from the roll and then ordered evidence taken. In regard to the charge the testimony went to show that Selleck had offered to sell his vote for $250, representing at the time that the other side had offered $1000. Selleck subsequently came around to defendant's stable and requested the loan of $20, saying he wanted to distribute it among the boys. It appears that Howe was frequently seen about the stable, and that he inquired about the purchase of a horse, saying he would call again. The court denounced Selleck's action in severe terms, and then held him to answer with bail fixed at $5000.

Married in Jail.

A marriage was performed in the city prison yesterday, the contracting parties being Wm. Harris and Mary J. Myers, both of this city. It appears the young girl ran away from home last week and took lodgings with her lover, who in turn left the place where he was employed and devoted his attentions to the girl. In the meantime he became intoxicated and gambled away all his money. Detectives who were put on the track of the wayward girl by her father found them occupying the same room and arrested both parties. When taken to the city prison the girl grew hysterical at the separation from her lover and refused to be comforted. Harris promised to marry her, and the parents assenting, the ceremony took place, after which the pair were released.

Fast Time by a New Steamer.

San Francisco, Jan. 2.—The new steamer Tacoma, built for the transportation of coal and other freight from Washington territory to this port, has arrived from Philadelphia, making the trip in 4 days 12 hours, 30 minutes—fastest trip around the Horn on record. She will soon be followed by another ship. The San Pedro, also intended for the coal trade between the above points and Tacoma, was built by Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia. She is an iron propeller of 3119 tons register, 350 feet in length, 43 feet beam and 23 feet depth of hold.

New Officers Installed.

New judges of the superior court took their places on the bench to-day, with the exception of Judge D. J. Toohey, who made a demand for a seat in Judge Fulton's court. The latter refused to vacate on the ground that his term of office will not expire until the 8th inst. The matter has been referred to a meeting of the other superior judges. In cases of justices of the peace, one of the judges, whose term was about to expire, received three applications from justices elect and refused to recognize the credentials upon the same ground. Mayor and other municipal officers will enter upon their duties January 8th.

Meeting of Mining Presidents.

A meeting of presidents of Comstock mines, under the control of the bonanza firm, was held in this city to-day, at which a schedule of proposed reductions were submitted and considered. No definite arrangement is yet agreed upon but another meeting will be held to-morrow at which time rates of salaries and contracts will be determined upon.

Canal Stock Sold.

Merced, Jan. 2.—Eleven hundred shares of stock of the Farmers canal company have been sold to C. H. Huffman, of this town, and Charles Crocker, president of Southern Pacific railroad. The whole number of shares of the company is 1175, valued at $50,000. By this purchase they have secured two-thirds of the stock and will proceed to enlarge the canal and turn water ready for irrigating all the valley from the foothills to San Joaquin county. It is said that the enterprise will give greater impetus to business in Merced county than anything that has taken place for years, not excepting the building of a railroad.

Fire in Sutro Tunnel.

Virginia City, Jan. 2.—At seven o'clock Saturday morning fire was discovered in the north branch of Sutro tunnel. Water was turned into the mine as the men advanced, driving the smoke back with a stream of water from hose. The fire was overcome and men were then put to work repairing the damage. Work about the mine will not be stopped.

Mysterious Affair.

Hamilton, Jan. 2.—Geo. P. McConkey, county treasurer and agent for Wells, Fargo & Co., at this place, was found dead on the floor of his office at three o'clock this morning, shot through the heart and body. He was found lying between two safes. The pistol was found lying eight feet from the body with one chamber empty. The safe was untouched. A dispatch received by the victim's father in this city states that young McConkey was murdered and robbed.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 3, 1883.

OBSTRUCTIVE EFFORTS.

A noticeable feature of the recent debate on the senate bill for civil service reform, but was the evident inability of many senators to comprehend the actual sentiment of the country on the subject. Another thing equally apparent was their disinclination to treat that sentiment with respect. It is only truth to say that these things were more conspicuously seen in the conduct of certain democratic senators than of any others, though the bill itself was prepared and urged by the distinguished democratic senator from Ohio, Mr. Pendleton. Among those who attempted to meet the bill with flings, gibes and sneers, Mr. Voorhees of Indiana, was foremost. One of his devices was an announcement of his intention to submit an amendment to require that all applicants for appointment as commissioners under the act should undergo a public examination before a committee of five school teachers—not more than three of whom should [illegible] to ascertain whether such applicants possessed a knowledge of the interior of Africa, the headwaters of the Amazon, the isothermal line, the Monroe doctrine, and the the momentum of a body of known weight moving with a given velocity necessary to proper discharge of clerical work in the civil service of the government."

As satire this wholly misses its mark. There are many who, like Mr. Voorhees, wholly misunderstand the purpose of the effort in behalf of civil service reform, or who, if they do understand it, are directly opposed to its object. The examination of applicants is merely intended as some test of their intelligence and attainments. It is not pretended that points of special information like those mentioned by Mr. Voorhees are essential to proper discharge of clerical work in the civil service; but certainly a person will be no worse as a clerk by having some knowledge of certain simple facts of science. But the main object of the movement is of another kind. It proposes and insists upon a divorce of the public service from partisan management, and therefore from partisan abuses. It is designed to protect the civil service and the persons who are employed in it against party bosses, brokers in patronage and dispensers of spoils. It is for this very reason that many do not like it. Mr. Voorhees has hopes which lead him to look forward to the time when his own party may be able to control the offices,—and he wants nothing placed in the way of the easy working of the old spoils doctrine.

Objection is also made to the bill on the ground that it deals only with persons in subordinate positions. The question is often asked: Why not make the rules of appointment and of tenure apply to the higher as well as to the lower places? Because congress, in enacting a law on the subject, is compelled to take notice of the provision of the constitution which makes it the duty of the president to nominate and the senate to confirm all officials of higher rank. This duty cannot be devolved upon a commission. In all probability it will be necessary to amend the constitution before the civil service can be established and maintained on a proper basis.

SIUSLAW BAR AND THE COAST TRADE.

Within the past four years a large settlement has been made on the Siuslaw river, a stream of considerable size, which forms the dividing line between Lane and Douglas counties and puts into the Pacific. Near its mouth the Siuslaw broadens into a bay which is easily approached from the ocean. The depth of water on the bar is not great but schooner masters who have worked through the channel several times declare it to be as easy of passage as the entrance at Yaquina, Umpqua, Coos or any of the coast ports. But the Siuslaw channel has never been surveyed or charted by the government and insurance companies cannot or will not underwrite a vessel to navigate unsurveyed waters. As a consequence, schooners entering the Siuslaw void their insurance policies and go at owner's risk. Only very profitable engagements will tempt them to do this, so the people of the Siuslaw settlement are compelled to pay an almost double higher rate on all goods which they receive and produce which they ship. This is a great hardship for a new and struggling community and [illegible] which they ought not to suffer. The cost of a survey would be very light, and the U. S. engineers ought to have it made at once.

The Siuslaw country is the seat of a fine farming and dairy industry and with the advantages of cheap freights enjoyed by other coast localities will develop a trade profitable to the local community and to Portland as well. The coast trade is not considered by the business men of Portland for what it really is worth. Each of the dozen or more coast ports between Neah bay on the north and the Umpqua on the south ought to contribute to the business of this city and could easily be made to do so. The trade of these places at this time is large, aggregating fully three hundred thousand dollars per year, every dollar of which ought to come to Portland. We would do better to leave Boise City and Missoula hunt their markets and expend more effort to gain and hold the business which is clearly within our reach.

"PUTS" AND "CALLS."

The public have been very much exercised over the investigation going on in congress with a view to a suppression of the traffic in "futures". By this we mean, the stoppage of any speculation in grain, pork, whisky, railroad stocks, other than buying at a certain valuation and holding it in absolute possession for rise in its market price; and the sale of such articles as a person may have in absolute ownership. The idea is to check the wholesale spirit of gambling which is pervading mercantile society and making hitherto reputable merchants and railroad officers appear in the broad glare of day as no better than so many thimbleriggers and faro-bankers.

For the benefit of those who are not used to the dialect of the stock exchange, we would state that a "call" is a case in which a man wanting 20 shares of stock pays $20 the privilege good for ten days. Suppose the stock is at $18 when the "call" is made, and goes to $25, the holder of the "call" gets a profit of $7 per share, less the one dollar per share that he has paid for the privilege. This is the same as the holder of the "call" betting the broker $20 that the stock would jump from $18 to $25 within ten days. The "puts" are the exact reverse of the "calls," or in other words a man "puts" up $20 [illegible] a stock worth $28 will go down to $20 within ten days. If the stock falls the holder of the "put" goes to the broker and says, "Here's your twenty shares of Erie at $20." "Oh," says the broker, "I don't want any Erie. I have more than I want." "But" says the holder of the "put" indignantly, "I have paid you $20 to bind a bargain that you will take twenty shares at $20 when it was selling at $28." "I know [illegible]," says the broker, "and here's your $8 per share rather than take the stock." Of course that is simply "[illegible]." The stock [illegible] that it will [illegible] in value and the holder of the "put" pockets $8 per share less the $1 per share which he paid for the privilege.

The objection to this gambling in grain and pork, as carried on at Chicago [illegible] primary [illegible] cases. The farmer [illegible] speculations [illegible] routine of [illegible] and he gets his own prices [illegible] he did before these "puts" and "calls" were [illegible]. But the fault is that the system is making an army of gamblers who have no money invested in any legitimate industry and aim to get rich by the [illegible] of the wrist. It is destroying merchants' credit and [illegible] by the thousand. They [illegible] the surplus of their own earnings and if they win, they squander their winnings in extravagant folly. No good can be [illegible] in that way. If they lose, they [illegible] and they are apt to manipulate funds [illegible] their employers [illegible]. And it is [illegible] to this insane haste to become rich without labor, without investment and without solid basis, that [illegible] the long and melancholy roll of suicides, defalcations and disappearances that are daily telegraphed across the continent.

It should be made a crime for a man to sell what he does not possess. If a speculator takes a "call" he sells what he has not. If he takes a "put" he is doing the same thing, the only difference being as to which of them does it. In either event it is virtually obtaining money by false pretenses, for if a man with $2500 capital agrees to deliver 1000 shares of stock to different parties in lots of 20 to 50 shares, and that stock rises five dollars per share he certainly knows he will lose twice the amount of his entire capital. The failure of Thompson, McKee and others, in the "bucket shop" business in San Francisco, shows the utter dishonesty with which such institutions are managed. If a man should take $500 as a bonus to sell Senator Dolph's house to some unknown purchaser for $50,000 within twenty days, that man would be apt to land in jail, because he knew he could not deliver the property when he received the bonus of $500. But that man is guilty of no greater dishonesty than is daily and hourly perpetrated in Wall street by men who "fail in business" and are never punished for it. This inequality of rascality makes both farce and fiendish. It is filling our penitentiaries with men who deserve a better fate, and who are worth saving. Can we not have some sort of legislation to check this pernicious outgrowth of a demoralized business system, before it is too late?

Noticeable among the efforts making in various parts of the country to restrict the liquor traffic and reduce its evils is a bill introduced a few days since in the house of representatives by a member from Michigan which proposes to enact that the number of places where intoxicating drinks are sold in the district of Columbia shall not exceed two hundred; that the retail sale of liquors shall be permitted only on business streets and in business localities and in no case in a neighborhood occupied exclusively by private residences, and that the commissioners of the district shall see to enforcement of the law. In all probability the bill will not pass. Two hundred saloons would hardly meet the demands of congress and the lobby, to say nothing of the regular population.

In making up so large a paper as the New Year's OREGONIAN it would be strange if some errors and omissions would not occur. In looking over the paper we find that in a few instances corrections are to be made and omissions supplied. Among the latter we mention the prominent and responsible firm of Henrichsen & Greenberg, manufacturing jewelers. This house has been doing business here for twenty years. It manufactures jewelry of all descriptions suitable for this trade, and is a large importer of diamonds and watches. The establishment employs eleven hands in its manufacturing department, and its trade extends to all parts of the northwest.

We were told by the telegraph recently that Mr. Hendricks of Indiana was dying of gangrene. It now turns out that he is not only wonderfully alive but is just as deep in political plots and just as ambitious as Tilden himself. He has just risen up to say that he is not going to run for governor of his state to help Ex-senator McDonald to the presidency. It may be presumed because he does not love a brother who is a so gazing toward the white house. But Mr. Hendricks has in fact had his day. He is no longer heroic. His party is ignoring its ancient leaders and is on the hunt for new men—though Tilden and Hendricks may not know it.

Though the illustrated papers of America are enterprising they would hardly risk the enormous expense which the London Graphic incurred in the preparation of its Christmas number. It purchased a painting by Millais for $15,600, and for the entire edition the number of impressions necessary, owing to numerous colors, was 17,500,000. The total cost of the number was $105,000.

The Seattle Post Intelligencer on January 1st issued a handsome eight-page edition of 64 columns well filled with matter of interest pertaining to the resources of the sound country and the thrifty city of Seattle in particular. The issue reflects credit upon that paper and is deserving of the highest praise.

Rarely has any newspaper published a better review of the resources and business of its locality than that which appeared in the Astorian of Monday. It is evident that there is a steady prosperity at the "seaport of Oregon," corresponding fully with that prevailing throughout the country at large.

A bill has been introduced in congress to pay to the heirs of Count Pulaski, who fell at Savannah in 1779, the sum of $150,000, in recognition of their ancestor's services, and sacrifices, and satisfaction of the claims of said heirs for payment for his services as brigadier general in the armies of the United States.

There are now a little over 300,000 names on the pension rolls of the United States. Applications for pensions on file, if all allowed, would swell the number to nearly 700,000.

Illinois has 10,663 miles of railway—a much greater mileage than is to be found in any other state.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Washington Territory.

Seattle used [illegible] tons of coal in her cooking stoves during 1882.

It is rumored that through passenger trains will run from Wallula junction to Herron siding in Montana a distance of 293½ miles.

The car shed and rooms for the use of the N. P. at Wallula junction are nearly completed and will be ready for occupancy as soon as the necessary tracks are laid.

The extent and variety of the manufacturing interests of Seattle can be inferred from the fact that there are within the city limits [illegible] foundries, two ship yards with another to be established, one tannery, three boiler shops, six sash and door factories, five machine shops, two furniture, six saw mills, three brick yards, one [illegible] factory, as extensive perhaps as any in the coast, besides breweries, brickyards, fish packeries, flouring mills, soda water and ice factories, besides many other minor industries, small perhaps, but important in the direction of supplying home wants by home labor. Some of these institutions disburse large sums monthly. The pay roll of the Hall & Paulson furniture company, for instance, amounts to between $1,500 and [illegible] monthly and having recently admitted a new member of the firm, who controls a large amount of capital and will add a considerable sum to the business, the amount paid out as wages will be correspondingly increased. The pay roll of the Mattulath barrel factory amounts to between [illegible] and [illegible] per month, including the amount paid to men working in the company's logging camps.

[illegible] lively stride [illegible] by escaping from [illegible] streets at a lively [illegible] and some terror [illegible] in the morning [illegible] to a [illegible] street, which a Chinaman [illegible] from a [illegible] and the [illegible] struck the horse [illegible] crowd headed him off at the [illegible] he rushed down to Front and Charles, bringing up [illegible] frightened horse [illegible] to his feet each time and [illegible] He was pretty badly cut on the [illegible] was injured, but the buggy [illegible] scratch. Later in the forenoon a Brady's delivery wagon became [illegible] near the corner of Second and [illegible] into a run. He dashed up Second [illegible] First, and colliding with a lamp [illegible] round, the delivery wagon [illegible] animal was liberated with [illegible] the harness was taken from him [illegible] slight. Later in the day "Shorty's" [illegible] which is up to such tricks, ran [illegible] over on the seat. In the latter's [illegible] control the animal the reins broke [illegible] his back in the wagon, and the [illegible] his own way until he fetched [illegible] on Front street, by running [illegible] neither horse nor driver [illegible] the damage to harness and wagon [illegible].

[illegible] TERMINUS.—The Northern Pacific [illegible] company, an Oregon corporation, organized [illegible] time since with a capital of $5,[illegible] purpose of providing terminal facilities [illegible] Pacific railroad, Oregon Railway [illegible] Oregon and California, and [illegible] have taken steps toward procuring [illegible] to carry out the project. All [illegible] of real estate in Portland for terminal [illegible] have been or will be transferred to [illegible] This company is now negotiating [illegible] Loan and Trust company, [illegible] the necessary capital, which is to [illegible] bonds and mortgages, and will be [illegible] bridges, depots, side tracks and all [illegible] facilities. These will be leased to [illegible] above named at rates which [illegible] payment of interest on the loan [illegible] by which in time the mortgage [illegible] and the companies will [illegible] the property in proportion to [illegible] As soon as the negotiations are [illegible] the improvements will be commenced [illegible] pushed vigorously to completion.

[illegible] J. Murphy, who was indicted [illegible] five charges of forgery, seems [illegible] of any anxiety in regard to [illegible] days since he was in much distress [illegible] would be willing to become the [illegible] would extricate him from his [illegible] his fellow prisoners he stated [illegible] whether he had better suffer [illegible] and take his chances of [illegible] this quietus make with a [illegible] other implement. Yesterday, [illegible] a change had apparently [illegible] of the man. When the indictment [illegible] to him he remarked contemptuously [illegible] them bound, as they would [illegible] by and by. He did not care [illegible] at present. He seemed very [illegible] probable Brother Caples [illegible] earnestly with him to convince [illegible] ways and the impropriety of [illegible] Yes, verily.

[illegible] On Couch lake yesterday afternoon [illegible] about 25 years of age broke [illegible] skating and was submerged in [illegible] Efforts were made [illegible] a board across the hole, [illegible] continued to break, and [illegible] in water beyond his depth, [illegible] and benumbed with cold [illegible] from his perilous position [illegible] box thrown into the [illegible] until more boards [illegible] his weight upon the [illegible] on the pond in the bottom [illegible] A son of Chris. [illegible]—A gentleman who has just [illegible] collecting tour through Lane and [illegible] states that he found the farmers in [illegible] better condition financially than any [illegible] ten or fifteen years. Every [illegible] on hand, and [illegible] and looking forward to [illegible] new year. It is to be hoped that [illegible] may be realized and that [illegible] may visit them [illegible].

[illegible]—District Attorney Caples [illegible] yesterday into the mysteries of [illegible] he wished to try in order to know [illegible] have the effect of causing [illegible] such a case [illegible] Nothing has yet been [illegible] the [illegible] point as to the [illegible].

[illegible]—A few remaining touches [illegible] to the Couch school building before [illegible] occupancy. The building has been [illegible] by the board of directors and [illegible] occupied next Monday.

[illegible]

Laborers are in demand. A party was yesterday searching for 25 white men to drive scraper teams at $2 per day.

The French residents of Portland will hold a meeting to-night to take action in reference to the death of Gambetta.

C. P. [illegible] returned from the livery stable business yesterday, and the Blackhawk stables are now a thing of the past.

There will be good skating to-day on all the ponds and lakes—[illegible] the ice remains a week too late. Holiday vacation is over.

A good beginning in the finances of the police court for the new year was made yesterday, $170 being received from fines.

The regular meeting of the Women's Guild of Trinity church will be held this, Wednesday, afternoon at the church in the school room.

The cases of A. Richardson and Brusky, the Chinaman, charged with assault and battery upon each other, were continued in the police court until to-day.

Joe Niles arrived by the last steamer and was seen yesterday examining the National Bank building with a critical eye, evidently with a view of buying it.

The American ship Brilliant, having discharged her cargo at Albina, was brought over to this side yesterday and lies at the foot of Ash street waiting for charter.

Last night the street sweeper created such a dust on Front street as to cause a general stampede of passers by. Chief of Police Lappeus ordered the machine stopped until later in the evening.

Yesterday morning a carpenter in the employ of the O. & C. railroad company fell from the bridge at Harrisburg and sustained injuries which will probably prove fatal. His name could not be learned.

A Sitka Indian charged with selling hoochinoo to his brethren arrived here last evening in charge of a deputy U. S. marshal, who landed from the Idaho at Pt. Townsend and brought his prisoner by way of Kalama.

Fred Richardson, charged with stealing a ring from Helen Murray, had an examination in the police court yesterday. The testimony was so much at variance that Judge Moreland took the matter under advisement.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Judge H. Hurley, of Lafayette, is in the city.

Chas. W. Knowles, of Upper Astoria, is in the city and will remain all week.

D. Freidlander, son or member of the firm of B. Friedlander & Co., arrived here by the State.

The above estimate [illegible] new apparatus [illegible] year [illegible] running expenses [illegible] last year.

[illegible]

The commissioners held their regular meeting yesterday [illegible]

[illegible] Sprague [illegible] of the [illegible] and over-[illegible] meeting.

Chief Engineer [illegible] was [illegible]

[illegible] W. Dow [illegible] the [illegible] was [illegible] appointed to the vacancy.

Several applications for [illegible] were received. Action was postponed until the next meeting.

A system of rules and regulations for the government of the force were then discussed and with some amendments will be adopted at the next meeting. One of the rules is that no member of the department shall introduce into any engine house spirituous or malt liquors and that any member who shall be intoxicated going to a fire, or while at work, or when returning from a fire, shall be dismissed.

SYSTEM OF [illegible] AND ACCOUNTS.

Secretary Eppinger yesterday showed an Oregonian reporter, who called, the system of records and accounts. It is simple, yet perfect, and there is a check all round. The foreman at the beginning of each month submits to the chief engineer a list of supplies needed for the month, which must be approved. An order is issued by the secretary for the supplies. The seller makes out duplicate bills to the department, certified to by the foreman and engineer. Bills are audited by the board, who present them to the city auditor and clerk. He retains these orders as his receipt, and with the approval of the mayor issues demands on the city treasurer. Before payment of salaries are made, the foreman returns to the board a complete roll-call for the month together with a list of supplies received and consumed. There are three monthly pay rolls: one for the officers, one for the engine companies and one for the hook and ladder company, and all must be signed. Neat blanks have been prepared for this system.

A book is kept showing in detail the expenses of the fire alarm telegraph, another for department supplies, another for salaries, another for expenditures by commissioners, another for the complete record of fires, and another for department record.

DEPARTMENT NOTES.

The commissioners' room was yesterday supplied with a gong, the one formerly used by Couch company. For the benefit of the occupants of Union block it is well enough to state that the gong will be muffled at night.

All the company houses and the commissioners' office will be furnished with telephones.

THE FERRY WAR.

Latest from the Front—All not Quiet on the Willamette—Montgomery, Wilson, et al Enjoined.

The contest in regard to riparian rights and the Albina ferry still wages. Every strategic movement of one party is met by a counter movement of the other. Yesterday an account was given of a demonstration by water made by the forces under Montgomery whereby the piles driven by Mr Shaver's forces were broken off and a passage to Montgomery's property secured. Last evening a counter movement was made by Shaver and [illegible], wherein complaint is made that Messrs. Montgomery, Wilson et al were threatening to do certain acts and that the doing of said acts or any of them would work great and irreparable injury to plaintiffs.

Thereupon Judge Stott, after reading and filing the complaint and upon plaintiffs giving a bond as required by law in the sum of $500, ordered that said defendants and each and all of their agents, attorneys and employes, be restrained, enjoined and forbidden from interfering with, disturbing or destroying plaintiffs' possession of the property described or from putting out, breaking off, removing or destroying any piling or from driving piles or erecting buildings or establishing or putting upon said premises any improvements or from establishing a ferry landing or ferry slip upon, through or over said premises or from landing a ferry boat thereon, thereto or across the same, or from putting any barge, scow or obstruction in front of said premises.

When the reader has finished the above and taken breath he will probably conclude that all emergencies are provided for and that Shaver et al are entitled to say "checkmate." The injunction was served by Sheriff Sears on Messrs. Montgomery and Wilson and on their employes at Albina last evening. Shortly after service was made Mr. Shaver caused a large scow to be moored in front of the property to obstruct the passage of any stray ferry boat or other craft which might attempt to make a landing there.

In regard to Shaver driving piles and claiming riparian rights at an angle with the river bank it is stated that the property in dispute is within the limits of East Portland and that the city has control of all property inside the wharf line and that Shaver obtained a permit from the city to construct a wharf there. So it remains to be seen whether riparian rights as defined by U. S. law can be changed by a city when the property is within its limits. The next movement of the campaign is anxiously awaited.

Our East Portland correspondent furnishes the following in regard to the above matter: Mr. O. F. Paxton, attorney for Mr. G. W. Shaver, entered complaint in Judge Bullock's court Monday against Ed. W. Bingham, agent for J. B. Montgomery, Jas. T. Gray, captain of the Lurline, and Al. Hastings, an employe on a pile driver, accusing them of "wilfully breaking, cutting away and injuring or destroying a boom," the property of the said Shaver. Warrants being issued, the parties were arrested and released on their own recognizance to appear yesterday at 1 P. M. Subsequently a similar complaint was lodged against Lee Hoffman and Chris. Angdell, employes on a pile driver, and Frank Ritchie, watchman for Mr. Montgomery. All parties were arraigned yesterday except Hoffman and Ritchie, and released on their own recognizance to appear Thursday at 1 o'clock. Mr. Bingham became responsible for the appearance of Hoffman and Ritchie.

MISSING MONEY.

Cash to the Extent of $545 Taken Almost from Under a Man's Eyes—Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

Yesterday morning Mr. W. R. Hutchinson [illegible] arrested [illegible] charged of [illegible] the Western [illegible] The money [illegible] was [illegible] was stolen [illegible] which was [illegible] Justice [illegible] That amount [illegible] the Western saloon.

To Deputy Attorney Caples, who was called upon to [illegible] the case, accompanied by an Oregonian reporter, visited the scene of the robbery and Mr. [illegible] made an affidavit [illegible] He was alone in the store, having [illegible] to help him [illegible] when [illegible] the front door, which is through [illegible] a small [illegible] ordinary [illegible] of the [illegible] saloon [illegible].

Mr. [illegible] was [illegible] alone [illegible] Hutchinson [illegible] both [illegible] a bottle of [illegible] and [illegible] money [illegible] the bar [illegible] When [illegible] saloon [illegible] passed him [illegible] to the [illegible] standing in the bar room. Before [illegible] went into the store [illegible] drawer [illegible] He said [illegible] the front door. He [illegible] and then was not surprised, therefore, upon going back to the bar room, to notice that Hutchinson had gone also, having made his exit by the back door, opening on G street.

Some little time passed, during which no one entered the place, until a young man came in who asked to have a $20 piece changed. Upon going to make this accommodation Roth discovered his loss. The circumstantial evidence was strong as to the guilty party, hence the arrest spoken of above was caused.

In the court room Mr. Caples stated that he believed both the interests of the defendant and the ends of justice would be better subserved if the examination of the matter was postponed a short period. This delay, he argued, might bring out evidence of a different character from that which was now so strongly against the prisoner, or it might serve to bring to light the whereabouts of the still missing money, of which Hutchinson stoutly denied all knowledge, averring his complete innocence of the crime.

Taking this view of the case, Justice Keegan postponed the examination until this afternoon at four o'clock and held Hutchinson in $500 bonds to appear before the court at that time. Being unable to furnish the required amount the latter was sent to the county jail to spend the night.

DISGUSTING BRUTALITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I have seen several items in your paper in regard to James Turk, a sailor's boarding house keeper of this city, which appeared to me almost incredible, but a scene I witnessed on board the steamer Mountain Queen on the trip to Astoria the early part of last week convinced me that the statements made were correct. Turk was a passenger on the same trip, in company with several sailors, whom he was apparently taking down to join a ship. In the course of the trip I saw him seize one of these tars, a very small-sized one, and after getting an arm around his neck, proceeded to deal him a number of heavy blows on the face and head, at the same time exclaiming, "I'll teach you, you [illegible]," etc. I was standing near and saw no cause for this outburst of brutality, which disgusted all beholders. After we reached Astoria and the men had been paid their advance, I saw Turk playing cards with them, doubtless thinking they would need no money after they got to sea.

The Daily Oregonian

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. [illegible]

SOUTHERN OREGON.

Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Coos, Lake and Curry Counties.

A GREAT BUT COMPARATIVELY UNDEVELOPED SECTION.

A Country Capable of Producing all the Cereals and Fruits of the Temperate Zone—Wide Stock Ranges—Vast Coal and Timber Fields, Etc.

That part of western Oregon [illegible] counties [illegible] much dryer than that of western Oregon but not so dry as that of eastern Oregon. It is a little colder in winter and a little warmer in summer than the [illegible] of the Willamette valley. It has great resources [illegible] and timber, [illegible] thirty years and more.

Douglas County

Is the largest and most important of the [illegible] counties at present. It lies north of [illegible] Oregon and extends east and west from the Cascade mountains to the Pacific ocean. Agriculture and wool growing are the chief industries of Douglas county. Although 200 miles from a port of shipment, Douglas has been a wheat growing section for ten years, and each season contributes hundreds of tons of wheat to the Oregon surplus. Its yields have of course been very high, but on the other hand crops have been certain and very large and farmers have made money. Comparatively little of the land of Douglas county is under cultivation. The river bottom and prairies are all under the plow, but the rougher hill and brush lands are not cultivated and are given up to sheep and cattle. Douglas county is the best sheep range on the Pacific coast. All the conditions of climate and food are perfect from the shepherd's standpoint, and the product of wool brings a higher price than that of any other section. Wool growing is made a specialty by many, and the best grades of wool sheep have been introduced.

The Umpqua river, a beautiful stream, not navigable, runs through the county and drains its entire length. The Umpqua near its mouth broadens to the bay which is entered by schooners and is the seat of a large lumber business. At Gardiner, a large saw mill town, about eight miles from the entrance, two saw mills, both the property of San Francisco capitalists, are in constant operation and turn out a hundred thousand feet of lumber per day. This is naturally the shipping point for Douglas county. The grade from the middle of the county west down the Umpqua river is easy, and a narrow gauge railroad could be built for a comparatively small sum. The valley itself would afford a large business, while the country north and south would also contribute to its support.

At regular seasons, salmon of fine quality abound in the lower Umpqua, and two canneries put up each year about ten thousand cases. Timber, fish, wool, hops, hides, fresh fruit and leather, are the exports of the lower Umpqua, and their value in the year amounts to half a million dollars. Lumber is of course the greatest item.

Roseburg

Is the principal town of Douglas county. Its population is about 1200, having increased about 150 during the past year. Roseburg sells during the year about $[illegible],000 worth of general merchandise and farming machinery. It ships about 600 tons of wheat each year and about 550,000 pounds of wool—most of which is handled by its merchants. A great share of the live stock, poultry, etc., consumed in the Portland market is also shipped from Roseburg. Much fine finishing lumber is also sent from Roseburg to Portland. The whole shipments of this point are about two-fifths of the total shipments of Douglas county.

For several years past Roseburg has been the southern terminus of the Oregon and California railroad, and consequently the distributing point for all of southern Oregon except the bays on the coast which deal by ocean with San Francisco and Portland. All goods used in Jackson and Josephine counties have been sent via the O. & C. R. R. to Roseburg and from there freighted in big wagons across the mountains. All shipments of these counties have likewise been sent out by wagon to Roseburg, which of course became the depot for a considerable transfer business. With continuation of the railroad south, this transfer business has moved along and away from Roseburg. And yet relations of acquaintance and credit send a good deal of the southern Oregon trade to the town, and it has not lost as severely as even its merchants feared. People coming in wagons from the south to lay in household stocks, leave their teams at the end of the track, which is now 40 miles beyond Roseburg, and come on by train to town where they do their trading. But this, of course, is but temporary. Just as soon as the railroad is through, towns along its line will take the southern trade and Roseburg must look for support to her own local field. This, fortunately, is rich and capable of great development. Fine opportunities for new-comers abound, and during the past year several hundred immigrants have come in. There is scarcely any doubt but that the rapid growth of the surrounding country will amply compensate for the retiring southern trade, and that Roseburg will not only hold its own but continue to grow.

An enterprise is now on foot to connect Roseburg and Coos bay on the coast by rail, and this, if consummated, will make Roseburg a place of great importance. The ocean route from San Francisco to Coos would then compete with the ocean route from San Francisco to Portland for the freight of western Oregon, and Roseburg's position at a point of junction would be most favorable. Roseburg has good churches and schools, fine residences, two of the best general stores in Oregon and several smaller establishments.

Roseburg is the chief, but there are several other good towns in Douglas county. Oakland and Drain north, and Canyonville south of Roseburg, ship large lots of grain and other produce and are thriving local centers. Wilbur, another small place, is celebrated for its very excellent academy.

Jackson County

Extends from the southern limit of Douglas to the California line. It is a rough, mountainous region seamed with valleys, the main one being that of the Rogue river, thirty or more miles long, north and south, and varying in width from two to fifteen miles. It is one of the finest bodies of farming land "out of doors," and is the seat of a large settlement. For an old-settled county the Rogue river valley is but poorly developed, a condition due to its complete isolation. It is hemmed in by high mountains many hundred miles away from the great markets and while rolling in fatness, has been unable to sell its products. The only market available for the farmers of Jackson county to this time has been that afforded by the miners in the mountains, the stage company and the freighters. The demands of all these have been comparatively small, not great enough to stimulate production, and so the county has jogged along at a slow pace. But it has great resources which only need to be awakened to spring into greatness. The climate is the most agreeable in the state. There is more sunshine and less rain than in western Oregon, while there is no danger of drouth. Crops every year are absolutely certain. Jackson county has a wider range of production than any other county in the state. Grapes which grow only on warm hillsides and do not fully mature in eastern and western Oregon here attain the highest perfection. Several vineyards near Jacksonville have produced well during a course of years and have given the business of wine making a start. In no other section of Oregon does corn grow well. But, under the genial sun here, it grows in vast fields, which reminds the traveler of the western prairies. Peaches grow well here, and all other fruits. All kinds of vegetables thrive and all the cereals grow in the same full abundance as in other sections.

Mining is the chief industry of Jackson county and the one on which all others depend. Without the miner Jackson county would have remained till now a sparsely settled stock country. The gold and silver taken out of the ground has been paid to the outer world for goods. Without this the people could not have become rich in their inland situation because it has been impossible to transport their products to market. But mining has never been a fitful industry dependant upon "booms" and seasons of excitement. Great areas of ground are known to be rich in gold and by the hydraulic process to pay about a given profit. Men have engaged in the business as regularly as others engaged in the business of wheat growing, and without making great fortunes, have prospered steadily. No less than six hundred men are engaged in the mining business in Jackson county, and fully as many more in the adjoining county of Josephine.

There are few industries in Jackson county besides those of agriculture and mining and those which depend upon them. A small woolen mill at Ashland consumes a good share of the wool grown in the county and turns out a fine quality of cloth. This is one of the few products which will stand the heavy freight rate out. Wine making, alluded to above, engages the attention of three firms, who do a small but profitable business. Brandy making is also carried on by several small establishments.

The principal towns in Jackson are Jacksonville and Ashland. The former is the county seat and each has a population of about nine hundred. They are thrifty well built towns, well provided with church and school privileges. At Ashland there is a college under the management of the M. E. church which is locally famed as a place of thorough instruction.

This is the condition of Jackson county at the present time, but it is on the eve of great development. The O. & C. R. R. is pushing toward it, and within the next two years will run through the Rogue river and other valleys, affording them the market facilities for which they have so long waited. There are indications that the most wonderful development seen in Oregon will be rivaled by the advancement of this splendid region.

Josephine County

Is a large sparsely settled region valuable for its mines, its timber and its farming and stock lands. Several small mills turn out most of the lumber used in the mines of Josephine and Jackson counties and for building purposes. Mining is the chief industry, however, and will be till the railroad comes.

Coos County

On the southern coast is a rich county which practically belongs to California. It enjoys the special advantage of a good harbor at Coos bay, and is the seat of a great business in coal and timber. Coos is separated by rough country, and comparatively great distances from the other sections of the state and its industries almost wholly in the hands of California capitalists. Half of its surface is underlaid with coal and it is covered with immense forests of fir and spruce. Several large [illegible] mills [illegible] the property of [illegible] quantities of lumber [illegible] the San Francisco market [illegible] the property of [illegible] coal mines, in [illegible] the neighborhood of [illegible] great quantities of coal which like the timber is shipped away to the San Francisco market. [illegible] Coos bay. The inhabitants [illegible] they are rapidly acquiring [illegible] not retained in the county as part of its permanent wealth. [illegible] afford a large market, which is supplied wholly by [illegible]

[illegible]

Curry County

[illegible]

Lake County

Is east of Jackson and one of the group of eastern counties. It is at present a great stock range. Its distance from railroad or other means of transportation renders its fine resources at present unavailable, but it has the elements of great future wealth. [illegible] is very sparsely settled.

Crook County

Lies south of Wasco and was partitioned from it only a few months ago. [illegible] and though naturally [illegible] not be fully developed [illegible] some time in the future when it is tapped by a railroad. At present its population is complete. There is much good land there open for entry, as there is also in Wasco.

THE ALBINA FERRY.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In your issue of this morning you refer to the controversy in Albina between Mr. Shaver and J. B. Montgomery as "the ferry fight," and you forestall the county court by saying that its policy is to grant additional licenses, etc. I know The Oregonian would not purposely do the present Albina ferry company an injustice, and it could not do that company an injustice without impairing its own high standing as a just and impartial newspaper. But newspapers receiving, as they do, their information upon current topics from many sources, without time or opportunity to ascertain what motives of interest their informants may have, are, like the rest of the world, liable to mistake. I therefore feel free to ask space for this statement.

The present Albina ferry was established in October, 1880, by license of the county court. Mr. J. B. Montgomery and Dr. R. B. Wilson, land owners on the respective sides of the river where the ferry was located, joined in the petition for the ferry. In fact one of the petitions gives as a reason for asking a license the fact that Wilson and Montgomery were desirous of having the petitioners establish a ferry. Afterwards notices were served upon these two as adjacent land owners, and they both accepted service of such notice. Montgomery accompanied his acceptance with a special request in his own writing to the county court that the license be granted. These men were anxious for a ferry because of the benefit it would be to their own land, but since the ferry would not then pay, they desired the petitioners to take the risk of the investment. The ferry was established, and for nearly two years and until last March it did not pay running expenses. It did not begin to pay anything upon the investment until last fall, about the time the Albina "boom" got fairly under way. Mr. Montgomery stationed a man at the landing to tally the business of the ferry, and becoming satisfied it was destined to become a good property, he and Dr. Wilson posted notices of an application for a second license over the route already occupied by the existing ferry, basing their claim upon the alleged fact of their ownership in the land where the present ferry landings are located, and at the same time Dr. Wilson served notice on the present company requiring them to give up their landing on the west side.

The object and effect of a second ferry is simply to destroy the existing ferry. To show the truth of this it is only necessary to say that the landings of the present ferry are over lots 25 and 26, block [illegible], on the west shore, and on land adjoining river lot 13, on the south, on the east shore. The termini of the ferry now applied for by Montgomery & Wilson, as described in their notices, are as follows: On lots 27, 26 and 27 block 118, on the west shore, on land adjoining river lot 11 in the south, on the east shore. It is clearly apparent and is shown in the case that it is impossible to establish a second ferry within this latter description that will not traverse the entire route of the present ferry, and that one or the other must stop. Wilson and Montgomery both own land below the present ferry, and had they been so inclined could have asked for a ferry where there would have been no injury to the present ferry except such as naturally results from a division of patronage. Upon the east side the Albina ferry has its landing on a county road, although Mr. Montgomery claims that the road, owing to some technicality, is illegal. Upon the west side the ferry company crosses over land owned by Dr. Wilson, and, although they believe that he is now estopped to deny such right by his own petition, yet they are willing to pay him the highest rental value for the use of it until the expiration of the five years for which their license was granted, and, as a matter of fact, have paid him rental regularly, until, concluding to get possession of the ferry for himself, he refused to accept such rent.

So far as the Shaver controversy is concerned, the Albina ferry has had no hand in it. That controversy arose last summer between Messrs. Shaver and Montgomery before the Albina ferry had become sufficiently remunerative to be a desirable property.

ONE OF THE PRESENT OWNERS.

East Portland, Jan. 2, 1883.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

An article appearing on the local page of your paper of this morning, headed "The Albina Ferry Fight," contains several statements which, so far as they relate to me, are entirely erroneous, and your reporter has been greatly misinformed in the premises by persons, I have no doubt, who are interested in the matter.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of these persons to argue their law suits through the columns of the public press. Such a practice is, in my opinion, highly improper, and it can have but one motive—to bulldoze the courts into giving them a decision without regard to the rights of other parties who conduct their proceedings in a legitimate manner.

I have no interest in or connection with the Albina ferry in any way, and no interest whatever in that ferry fight, except to protect my property from lawless and [illegible] seizure. It is not true as stated in the article referred to that I ever caused a row of piles to be driven across the front of any property owned by J. B. Montgomery, and it is not true that I have caused any piles to be driven in the night.

The facts are these: Mrs. Elizabeth Irving and myself own a tract of land in the northwest corner of East Portland, bounded on the north by the north line of the city and fronting on the river. We have a license from the city of East Portland to erect wharves in front of our property. J. B. Montgomery owns a piece of land in Albina, fronting upon the river, and lying just north of East Portland.

More than a year ago I drove a row of piles out along the north line of East Portland into the river in front of our land preparatory to building a wharf there. Last November I commenced work on the construction of this wharf, when J. B. Montgomery set up a claim to the property (which lies in East Portland), by reason of some pretended "riparian rights" as owner of the land in Albina, but as I have since learned, because it was necessary for him to have it as a place to land in order to procure a ferry license. He commenced a suit and procured a temporary injunction and I stopped work on the wharf, and until yesterday the matter has stood in statu quo. On yesterday, which was a non-judicial day, upon which no restraining order could be issued, the steam [illegible] Lurline, under the direction of E. W. Bingham, an attorney for Montgomery, went to my place and forcibly pulled out a portion of the piles I had driven, at a time when I was across the river in Portland.

This is the most gross violation of law and decency I have ever heard of. The matter was in litigation and all work stopped by order of the court, and this action of Montgomery and his attorney is a high handed outrage on the dignity of the law and a desperate attempt to seize by force what the courts will not give, besides being a wilful destruction of my property.

We have long been in possession of the premises in question as its owners, and the claim of Montgomery to it is but on a par with their proceedings yesterday.

Last evening E. W. Bingham, Capt. J. F. Gray, of the Lurline, and some of the men engaged in this matter, were arrested for this offense and are now awaiting trial.
